

G7 Toyama Declaration related to Sustainable Public Transportation

At the G7 International Conference on Vehicle Storytelling Education, we learned that while there are advanced and convenient public transportation systems in the world such as light rail and monorail, there are also traditional public transportation systems such as Dokar and there are regions that rely heavily on cars and motorcycles.

In addition, through city-to-city collaboration, we learned that each region has various issues such as traffic congestion and greenhouse gas emissions.

In order to cope with the after-COVID and even BEYOND-COVID era, we will further consider the importance and usage of public transportation, which is an integral part of our daily lives.

Furthermore, we hereby declare that we value international exchange beyond national borders to learn about the various issues that each country faces and to think and live together as members of a sustainable society.
